

For more information, please contact:

W. Todd Groce, Ph.D.
President and CEO
Georgia Historical Society
wtgroce@georgiahistory.com

104 West Gaston Street
Savannah, GA 31401
912.651.2125

One Baltimore Place NW,
Suite G300
Atlanta, GA 30308
404.382.5410

GEORGIAHISTORY.COM

GEORGIA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

HELPING TO SAVE AND SHARE FAMILY HISTORY

A Call
Women of rare before its to Shoulder your burdens &
Can more amusement alone
For the problems of life
The Georgia
Historical Society's
LEGACY
SOCIETY
w whom like say
Pis, to point
Shall women
Trubbs gain
Women old number one man
To woman we look for what's g
Boy Scouts are trained in
But his girls who will count in
Now who have children & you w
Don't shout for votes - let m
Daily endeavor to train up the
There his your duty old wom

A family's stories are passed on in many ways—photo albums of ancestors long gone, hand-written letters in faded ink, tales told at grandfather's knee.

Many of these family stories are also Georgia's stories, relevant to all who call Georgia home.

Unfortunately, as time goes by, photos fade, papers are misplaced, and memories are forgotten—a loss not only for family members but also for future generations of Georgians seeking to know more about those who contributed to our state's history.

The Legacy Society

GHS invites a select number of prominent Georgia families who have shaped our state's history to join the Legacy Society by donating their personal and/or family collections of papers, photographs, portraits, and museum-quality materials to be cataloged and archived at the Society's Research Center.

Future generations will be able to access these collections in perpetuity, sustaining each family's unique story and its impact on the state of Georgia and its place in our nation's history.

An endowment gift to accompany these family collections ensures the proper preservation and cataloging by the Society's professional archivists, who will also provide students, teachers, scholars, and the public with access to this important part of our state's history.

Members of the Legacy Society will be recognized with cast bronze plaques displayed prominently on the pilasters in the historic GHS Reading Room, as well as in the Society's publications and on its web site.

