

Teaching Challenging Histories

Teaching Challenging Histories: A Primary Source Approach, empowers educators, pre-service teachers, and students to navigate complex historical topics with confidence and clarity. By focusing on the use of primary sources, this program enables educators to explore diverse perspectives and critically examine pivotal events in Georgia's history.

Opportunities include:

Teacher Workshops and Professional Development

Tailored training aligned with state standards and delivered using Teaching with Primary Sources (TPS) coaches to equip educators with strategies for incorporating primary sources into lessons on challenging historical topics.

Pre-Service Partnerships

Collaborations with colleges and universities to prepare pre-service teachers and students for meaningful engagement with history in academic and community settings.

Digital resources include:

➔ Online Courses

➔ Online Exhibits

➔ History Snapshots

Decoding Histories

Decoding Histories engages K-12 educators and students in exploring the importance of reading and writing in cursive in order to understand written materials from the past. This program supports the ELA Georgia Standards of Excellence by using archival materials to deepen historical inquiry and strengthen their ability to read and write cursive, an essential skill for accessing historical texts.

Opportunities include:

Teacher Workshops and Professional Development

Tailored training aligned with state standards and delivered using Teaching with Primary Sources (TPS) coaches to help teachers integrate primary source analysis into lessons highlighting reading and writing cursive.

Field Trips and In-School Programs

Teachers can work with GHS staff to develop a custom in-person or virtual field trip based on a historical topic that incorporates cursive writing and primary sources.

Digital resources include:

→ Cursive Writing Practice

→ Digital Kits

→ History Snapshots
